

UNIVERSITY OF LINCOLN

Doctoral Study - Information Webinar

Mayo Education Centre has a long-standing relationship with the University of Lincoln, UK, through which many teachers in Ireland have studied for a part-time professional doctorate. Each year Irish teachers attend two weekends of study at Lincoln and academics from Lincoln visit the Mayo Education Centre each July to hold workshops and seminars.

Dr Joss Winn, who oversees doctoral study in the School of Education at Lincoln, will be holding a webinar for anyone who is interested in learning more about doctoral study: what it entails, the amount of work required, what distinguishes a PhD from an MA, and how doctoral study at Lincoln can be undertaken from Ireland. We hope that one or two Irish alumni will join him, too, to offer their perspectives.

A follow-up workshop in Mayo will take place in early May for those people who want to discuss this further and write a research proposal to accompany an application to Lincoln or any other university.

For further information about the professional doctorate at Lincoln, see <https://www.lincoln.ac.uk/course/eduprorp/>

A list of theses produced by students at Lincoln, including Irish colleagues, can be found here: <https://www.lincoln.ac.uk/education/research/schoolofeducationdoctoraltheses/>
